Historical notes on the 1912 Rolls Royce 40/50 'Silver Ghost'

The 'Silver Ghost' tourer with its 7.6 litre engine was accepted by the world as the leader in its class — in quality, performance, ease of control, smoothness and quietness. First produced in 1906, it was so successful it stayed in production until 1925 and is now one of the most sought after of all early cars — a 1908 model was recently sold for £7,200. The 1912 model was popularly called the 'Railway Carriage' because of similarities to railway carriages of the time — its original cost was about £1,500.

A superb Corgi Model of the latest, most modern fire fighting vehicle available today, with every feature authentically reproduced. Ladders have given way to hydraulic operating lifting booms on a revolving platform that carry a fireman quickly and easily to the source of the fire or to the rescue of trapped people—no more struggling up ladders! Throughout the elevating movement the fireman's cradle remains perfectly level as it rises and falls, and four retractable stabilisers hold the model in position while the booms are adjusted. The cab interior detail includes two firemen and steering wheel, while three firemen are seated immediately behind the cab. Glidomatic spring suspension is also fitted.
